Dear Colleague:

I am writing to update you on important information regarding our merger with United Technologies and to share some recent business highlights.

I am pleased to share that Jerry Witowski, Executive Vice President, Operational Excellence and Technology, has been selected as integration team leader from the Goodrich side. Jerry's long experience in multiple positions across Goodrich gives him the perspective for this important role. Joint integration planning with United Technologies/Hamilton Sundstrand will be an ongoing process, to ensure a smooth transition after the merger closes. On October 27, 2011, we filed our preliminary proxy statement with the United States Securities and Exchange Commission (SEC). A proxy statement is required when a company is soliciting shareholder votes, which is what we will be doing prior to the Goodrich shareholder vote on the merger. I encourage you to read the proxy statement, as it contains information regarding the merger and important information on how to vote your shares, if you are also a shareholder.

Filing the proxy statement is an important milestone and means that we are one step closer to completing the merger, which we expect to occur in mid-2012. In addition to the proxy filing, we have also updated our list of frequently asked questions (FAQs), which is attached for your convenience. The questions starting at number 26 are new, and we will continue to update this document as more information becomes available.

As we've communicated, the merger with United Technologies offers our employees the opportunity to be part of an organization with a similar vision and culture, and the depth of resources that are increasingly beneficial for sustained success in our industry. In addition, this merger will offer expanded opportunities for career growth and advancement for employees of both companies. We are excited to move forward with the integration planning process and hope you share our enthusiasm about this transformative step in our company's history.

Thanks to your continued hard work and dedication we also continue to make great progress on our strategic and operational initiatives. Some recent highlights include:

The first Boeing 787 Dreamliner was delivered to launch customer All Nippon Airways of Japan in late September. Goodrich has significant content on the 787 a major cross-enterprise effort is in progress to help ensure a smooth entry into service for Boeing and the airlines operating the 787.

Our Aerostructures team in Toulouse, France achieved a milestone with the delivery of the first nacelle and thrust reverser for the Rolls-Royce Trent XWB engine that will power the Airbus A350 XWB.

We acquired Winslow Marine Products, a leading provider of life rafts to the corporate aviation, helicopter, and marine markets. This strengthens our presence in the business jet market where we already offer a wide range of products.

We announced that the U.S. Air Force is reporting that the ORS-1 satellite is performing successfully in space, following its launch on June 29. ORS-1 is the first satellite in the Operationally Responsive Space program developed to support combatant command operations. Goodrich is the prime contractor on the ORS-1 program.

Consistent with our culture and our drive to continuously improve through the disciplined use of the Goodrich Operating System, we have finalized the 2012 Enterprise Policy Deployment Matrix, paving the way for our continued success.

We should all be proud of these achievements, which position Goodrich for continued growth and success. As we move forward, I know I can count on you to remain focused on our objectives and serving our customers with the same passion and commitment that they have come to expect from Goodrich.

It is important to remember that until the merger closes, Goodrich and United Technologies will continue to operate as independent companies. It will be business as usual here at Goodrich as we continue to execute on our business strategy. It remains extremely important that we continue to focus on our performance.

As the merger proceeds, we will make every effort to keep you informed with periodic updates. Thank you for your commitment to Goodrich and for all you do to make our company successful.

Sincerely,

Marshall Larsen
Chairman, President and Chief Executive Officer
