Check Point Total Security

In 2008 we launched our Total Security strategy that combines network, data and endpoint protections into a unified security architecture to deliver uncompromised security: a unified line of gateways, a single agent ensures endpoint security, and a single management console all designed to provide a standardized and efficient security infrastructure to improve security, reduce complexity and ultimately lower total cost of ownership.

Expanded Security Appliance lines

In addition, we expanded our network security appliance solutions with the introduction of five new models of the UTM-1 line of security appliances, and a new line of Power-1 high end security appliances that set a new mark for price/performance at a cost of less than $4/Mbps.

Innovation in End Point Security

Finally, we introduced and shipped the industry's first and only single agent for endpoint security that includes a personal firewall, remote-access VPN, anti-virus/anti-spyware, media/port security, and data security utilizing our market leading full disk encryption. Our security architecture can be scaled to businesses of any size and is managed with Check Point's market leading SmartCenter management solutions.

Nokia's Security Appliance Business Proposed Acquisition

During the fourth quarter we announced an agreement to further expand our network security appliance line with the proposed acquisition of Nokia's Enterprise Security Business. Over the last decade, Nokia has partnered with Check Point by providing a hardware platform (appliance) that runs Check Point security software. Nokia's appliances have been utilized by 85% of the Fortune 500 companies. 220,000 Nokia appliances have been installed with over 23,000 customers worldwide. Nokia decided to exit the enterprise market segment, and we are pleased to have the opportunity to acquire the security appliance part of Nokia's business. Once the acquisition is completed, Check Point expects to be able to provide customers with an expanded line of integrated gateway solutions, with a single source for development, delivery and service. The acquisition is expected to close in the first quarter of 2009.

Concluded Shwed, I'd like to thank our customers, partners and employees for the great results we generated in 2008 despite the challenging economic environment. While it's hard to predict the effect of the economy on our market, we will continue to invest and innovate. We are starting 2009 with an even more exciting technology roadmap that we believe will revolutionize the security market and extend the reach of our Total Security vision.
