VODAFONE AND SFR STRENGTHEN STRATEGIC GLOBAL ALLIANCE

Vodafone and SFR, the second largest French telecommunications company, today agreed to renew their strategic global alliance for a further four years. The two companies will continue to provide fixed and mobile telecommunications services to multi-national customers in France as well as roaming services for consumers travelling in and from the country.

The non-equity Partner Market agreement reaffirms SFR as Vodafone's strategic partner in France and builds on the strong cooperation which has existed between the two companies since 2002. France is an important enterprise market for Vodafone with a significant number of the Group's multinational customers either headquartered or having a satellite office there.

SFR Business Team and Vodafone Global Enterprise - the companies' business units that provide communications services to multinational companies - will work together on new business opportunities, including machine-to-machine (M2M) services, 3G and 4G roaming and unified communications across France and the rest of the world. Vodafone will also continue to offer SFR a range of Vodafone Global Enterprise services for use by customers in France.

Vodafone Group Chief Executive Vittorio Colao, said: Our agreement with SFR builds on a longstanding and successful collaboration that began more than eleven years ago, and I'm delighted that this will continue in future.

SFR's CEO Jean-Yves Charlier, commented: This latest agreement with Vodafone bolsters both companies' positions in the key enterprise market in France and confirms SFR as a leading player in the French telecommunications.

SFR customers will have access to Vodafone's mobile and fixed networks covering nearly 30 countries as well as approximately 50 Vodafone Partner Markets networks worldwide.

LEAVE YOUR PLASTIC CARDS AT HOME WITH NEW SERVICE FOR THE VODAFONE MOBILE WALLET

The days of searching a bag or drawer at home for supermarket loyalty cards, paper coupons or gym membership identification are over thanks to a new mobile app available from Vodafone. Customers can now electronically load all their plastic cards straight into Vodafone's mobile wallet located on their smartphone.

Vodafone signed an agreement with Austrian software company, Bluesource, to provide a Vodafone Wallet version of its mobile-pocket app - one of the largest and most popular customer cards and shopping apps in Europe. This service is free of charge to use and will sit within the Vodafone mobile wallet. It will be progressively rolled out in countries where Vodafone has already launched its mobile wallet, starting in Germany, the Netherlands and Spain from this month with other countries expected to follow during this year.

The app, which has been downloaded by more than one million users, allows a customer to load their physical plastic cards onto their smartphone by either scanning or typing in the number. Online templates already exist for a large number of loyalty cards from more than 1,500 leading service providers, including retailers, event organisers, transport companies and advertisers. If a user can't find the card they want, they can create a new template on their phone.

Stefano Parisse, Group Consumer Services Director of Vodafone, said: "Our customers want to take advantage of as many club, retail and membership offers as possible, but the number of plastic cards often exceed the capacity of their physical wallets.

Vodafone's mobile wallet, when used with the mobile pocket app, removes that problem by allowing a user to load a limitless number of loyalty cards directly onto their phone. Participating retailers also benefit since they will be able to send vouchers and special offers directly to the Vodafone mobile wallets of their regular customers.

The app will fit inside the mobile wallet alongside Vodafone SmartPass, a Visa-based payment card that can be used to purchase goods and services at contactless point of sale terminals across Europe. In addition to Vodafone SmartPass, launched in 2013, the company expects to add a number of other virtual stored value cards, transport tickets and coupons from third-party service providers to its mobile wallet.

Note to Editors

The Vodafone mobile wallet offers customers the speed, simplicity and convenience of managing their everyday transactions with a single tap of their smartphone, using innovative and reliable services developed by providers they can trust. Based on near field communications (NFC)-enabled technology, the mobile wallet is available to use on a number of leading smartphone devices from Samsung, Sony and HTC and that range is expected to expand rapidly during 2014.

A user can either download the mobile wallet to a mobile phone or via a home computer. In addition, personal details are stored directly on the latest mobile SIM card, making it very secure. If a user's smartphone is either lost or stolen, then the contents of their mobile wallet are covered by the same anti-fraud protection measures offered by financial services and all details on the SIM card can be wiped clean remotely.
