Companies Move to Regulatory Review Phase of ITC Transaction

One of the most transformational initiatives in Entergy's 100-year history continues building momentum this spring.

The proposed separation and merger of Entergy's transmission business into a subsidiary of ITC Holdings Corp. involves intense planning and implementation on the part of hundreds of people from both companies. A fundamental success factor for the transaction is earning approvals from appropriate regulators and completing in-depth reviews with others.

Here's a recap of where the transaction stands on the regulatory front:

All applications for the transaction are now on file with retail and federal regulators.

At the retail level, regulators in Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas and Mississippi and the city of New Orleans have published procedural schedules, which generally call for hearings and decisions to be completed by the end of the third quarter.

At FERC, Entergy and ITC have responded to comments filed in the proceedings, including comments related to the transmission rates, expected benefits, and rationale for the transaction, as well as questions about integration into MISO.

Entergy and ITC hosted technical conferences, exploring the transaction in detail and outlining the benefits to stakeholders in Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi and Texas. A similar conference is planned in New Orleans.

Additionally, Entergy filed separate rate cases in Louisiana and Arkansas, to include the effect of the MISO transition on retail rates since conditionally approved in all jurisdictions, as well as scenarios with and without the ITC transaction.

Within Entergy, regulatory leadership recently completed orientation meetings for more than 300 customer-facing employees, including customer service managers, national accounts managers and other relationship managers. The meetings introduced these employees to ITC and its operational model as well as explained the different, complimentary roles of MISO, Entergy, and ITC after the spin/merge. The LiveMeetings were led by Chief Integration Officer Joe Domino, Vice President of Energy Delivery Rick Riley, Vice President of Transmission Regulatory Compliance Mark McCulla, Transmission Regulatory Implementation Team Lead Jeanne Kenney, and operating company leaders. Archives of the presentation are available on the transmission merger SharePoint site.

Edgar Filing: ENTERGY CORP /DE/ - Form 425

During the spring and summer, our regulatory efforts will intensify as the transaction moves through the approval process for each of our retail and federal regulators, said Kenney. The transaction is a key strategic objective for both companies, and the benefits for our customers and our region are significant. Entergy and ITC employees are working hard to implement the transaction, and the rewards for our customers, our companies and our communities are going to be worth the effort.
