further expansion of its injection operation in Dongguan, China. The machines, which cost approximately $1.5 million, will be installed by July 2002. The Company also announced that it has purchased and upgraded its tooling software used in the mold-making process for enhanced precision and efficiency.

The Company also announced that construction of their new 550,000-square-foot plastic-injection plant is progressing well and remains on schedule. With construction expected to be complete by August 2002, the facility should be operational by October 2002. This new facility will expand Deswell's plastics division by approximately 40%. Moreover, the Company expects to build an additional 150,000-square-foot facility, which should be operational by March 2003. These facilities are being built on the 1.3 million square feet of land the Company leased in Dongguan to expand its plastic operations and to reduce its annual rent and labor costs.

Deswell expects to announce its fourth-quarter and year-end results and a dividend declaration in early June 2002.
